LESLIE WHEELER

The grisly murder of a visiting yachtsman, allegedly by a local Indian, rocks a seacoast town and severely tests the loyalties of a white woman and her Native lover. When Miranda Lewis, a workaholic writer of American history books, and her boyfriend, Nate Barnes, a hot-tempered Native American activist, visit friends—hers at a maritime museum on the Rhode Island coast, and his at a nearby Native-owned gambling casino—neither anticipates the storm that breaks when Miranda’s friend’s fiancé is murdered and Nate’s friend is the chief suspect. Miranda’s quest for the truth not only puts her at odds with Nate, but with her own friends. It also leads her deep into the victim’s past, and ultimately to a life-and-death struggle with a crazed killer.
